Zeebrugge Hero Scores Admiralty

Costly Error Navy Not Allowed To Take Trondheim, Says Keyes

LONDON (CP)—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, Conservative, declared in the debate of the campaign in the Commons today that the naval hazards in an attempt to take Trondheim in a direct attack "would have been trifling compared with other operations that I have organized."

"It is a shocking story of inaptitude," he said, "and I assure the House that it ought never to have been allowed to happen."

In the Norwegian campaign the capture of Trondheim was "essential, imperative and vital," he continued. If proper steps had been taken and carried out with resolution and speed, even after the first setback at Steinkjer, north of the port, "the situation would have been retrieved."

Admiral Keyes declared he was "astounded that members of the naval staff would not realize" it was necessary to gain command of Trondheim Fjord.

"When I realized how badly things were going I foresaw another Gallipoli," he said.

(Sir Roger was chief of staff of the naval forces that participated in the Gallipoli campaign.)

"I never ceased importuning the Admiralty and the war cabinet to let me take all responsibility to organize and lead the attack. Without naval co-operation, the whole operation was doomed to failure."

Sir Roger said he had told the Admiralty that "if the Italian bluster worried them" some other ships could have been used in Norway without affecting the strength of the fleet.

The naval authorities responsible, he said, "seemed to have concentrated on the naval hazards and to have been blind to the danger which the army would encounter if effective naval support were not immediately available."

"When at length I was allowed the opportunity to give my views, I was told there was no difficulty in going into Trondheim Fjord, but that it was not considered necessary as the army was making good progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships," Admiral Keyes declared.

WORTH RISK

"It was surely worth some risk to win so great a prize."

He said Norwegian officers "came to me and begged me to use my influence as far as I could."

Sir Roger added that he had been urging the Admiralty to take more vigorous action "ever since April 16."

Admiral Keyes said Mr. Churchill tomorrow night will deliver "a very fierce counter-attack on me" and asked the First Lord of the Admiralty to realize "my view, which is based on experience and precedent and achievement."

"I beg him to steel his heart and take the steps which are necessary to ensure that more vigorous naval action in Norway is no longer delayed," the Admiral said.

"Our general advancing from Steinkjer to Trondheim expected British ships to support him—not two German destroyers who fired on his flank, landed troops behind his advance forces, and captured or destroyed them."

"The Gallipoli tragedy has been followed step by step."

"If only we had used our fleet courageously the Germans by now would have been in a very dangerous position and eventually would have been decisively defeated."

Says Navy Insulted By Wedgwood

Sir Roger termed "a damned insult" a suggestion he attributed to Colonel Josiah Wedgwood, Independent, that "the British Navy had run away to the eastern Mediterranean because it was frightened of bombs."

Admiral Keyes, who led the successful attack on Zeebrugge in the first Great War, declared he had come down to the House in uniform for the first time to speak for some officers and men of the "fighting, seagoing navy who are very unhappy."

"It is not the fault of those officers and men—that the German warships and transports which forced their way into Norwegian ports by treachery were not followed in and destroyed as they were at Narvik," he continued.

Sir Roger said he had told the Admiralty that "if the Italian bluster worried them" some other ships could have been used in Norway without affecting the strength of the fleet.

The naval authorities responsible, he said, "seemed to have concentrated on the naval hazards and to have been blind to the danger which the army would encounter if effective naval support were not immediately available."

"When at length I was allowed the opportunity to give my views, I was told there was no difficulty in going into Trondheim Fjord, but that it was not considered necessary as the army was making good progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships," Admiral Keyes declared.

Attlee, Sinclair Criticize British Leadership

By J. F. SANDERSON

LONDON (CP)—Wide powers of supervising the day-to-day military operations have been placed on the shoulders of Winston Churchill, who becomes in effect Britain's First Lord of Warfare.

Prime Minister Chamberlain made the announcement to the House of Commons today when answering criticism of the government's direction of the campaign in Norway. He gave a long recital of the difficulties on the northern front and appealed to the nation to stand united in this hour of trial.

The Churchill appointment, Mr. Chamberlain said, ensures "that when policies are decided upon, they will be followed up with promptness and energy."

While retaining his post as First Lord of the Admiralty, would give guidance and direction to the chiefs of staff of the three fighting services.

WATCH ALL FRONTS

Mr. Chamberlain, who had been cheered when he entered the House, declared that "the campaign is not yet finished" in Norway, but warned the nation to remember: "There are other fronts which may at any moment blaze into a conflagration."

"This is not the time for quarrels among us," said the 71-year-old Prime Minister, but for close ing ranks and setting of teeth for the long, hard road ahead.

The Prime Minister faced a noisy opposition. At one time the Speaker of the House had to ask for silence.

With frankness, Mr. Chamberlain admitted the southern Norwegian campaign was a failure and the Allies had lost prestige. But it was nothing comparable to the reverse at Gallipoli in 1915, he said, and in view of German air superiority and availability of reinforcements and supplies, the only sensible thing to do was to withdraw the British force which was not much more than a division.

CALL FROM NORWAY

The primary reason troops were sent to southern Norway was that an urgent appeal had been made by the Norwegian commander-in-chief for an attempted attack on Trondheim.

When it was found to be impossible to capture the ancient Norwegian city, the troops were withdrawn.

"Is there anyone here who could have done otherwise?" he asked, searching the faces of members in all parts of the House.

But Mr. Chamberlain's speech was not the fighting one he had been expected to make in the face of a concerted attack against his administration. He spoke hesitantly

Argument Looms In Legislature On Gas Control

Indications developed in political circles today that the main fight over the government's plan to get permissive power to go into the gasoline business at the special session of the Legislature opening tomorrow afternoon will be on the question of government interference in business.

Attitude of the Conservative opposition on this point was the chief topic of interest today.

R. L. Maitland, K.C., party leader, reached the city this afternoon to hold a caucus of his members on the subject, but there was no definite statement of their stand pending this meeting.

Conservatives, however, will be able to muster only five members for the special session.

Herbert Anscomb, M.P.P. for Victoria, and one of the staunchest opponents of government interference, is absent in the east.

Capt. Macgregor Macintosh, the Islands, is on active service.

The C.C.F. opposition is expected to press for complete socialization of the gasoline business, as they have done before, and may criticize the government for not going far enough.

In the Liberal ranks today there were reported to be some dissidents to the policy of the government stepping into business, but the belief of observers here was that these would disappear after the party caucus on the issue.

EXTENSION OF CONTROL

Reliable sources today said the government will put the question to the caucus and to the house simply as an extension of the control measure it now exercises in the Public Utility Act.

The Utility Act says:

"The commission (Public Utilities Commission) may take such steps and employ such persons as are necessary for the enforcement of any order made by it, and for that purpose may forcibly or otherwise enter upon, seize, and take possession of the whole or any part of the movable or immovable property of any public utility affected by the order, together with the books, documents, and offices of the company, and may, until the order has been enforced, assume and take over the management of the business of the company for and in the interests of its shareholders and creditors of the public, and for such time as the commission continues to manage or direct the management of the company the commission may exercise all or any powers, duties, rights, and functions of the directors of the company in all respects, including the employment and dismissal of officers and servants of the company."

Government sources pointed out that application of a similar principle to the gasoline business is not a departure in government

Drilling Starts In Peace River

The British Columbia government started drilling for oil in the Peace River district today.

Premier Pattullo made the announcement on the basis of advice received by Hon. W. J. Asselstine, Minister of Mines, from Newell and Chandler Ltd., contractors on the job.

The first bit dug into the rock on the site near Commotion Creek selected by government engineers as the most likely spot in which oil could be found.

The contractors have equipment on hand to go down to 3,000 feet in the search for oil. Indications of the structure examined by engineers are that oil, if it is there, should be reached at about 6,600 feet.

For the last two months the contractors have been organizing their drilling staff and getting machinery into the site. Despite delays occasioned by a sudden thaw and the difficulties of hauling equipment by tractor over open country in some places, the drilling started on schedule, Mr. Asselstine said.

It is estimated the first hole will take about 100 days to complete.

The government will get detailed reports as the drilling progresses.

The project took on added significance in government circles in view of the recent gasoline "strike."

Premier Pattullo noted that if the drillers strike oil, the legislation he plans to place before the special session of the Legislature tomorrow will be particularly useful.

policy. Owing to the peculiar nature of gasoline, which is an imported product, special legislation is required to deal with it.

Most members of the cabinet have not the slightest desire for the government to go into the gasoline trade if it can be avoided. However, they explain, without the authority to do so the government has no means of enforcing its price-fixing or other control measures. This was demonstrated by the "strike" which left the public without a gasoline supply for one week.

Routine preparations for the opening of the House at 3 tomorrow went ahead at the Legislative Buildings today. After a short throne speech by the Lieutenant-Governor there will be the introduction of the usual public bill upholding the right of precedence for the people's business and Premier Pattullo will then submit the gasoline bill. Adjournment overnight until Thursday afternoon is then expected to give all members an opportunity to study the measure.

No Conscription Yet For Older Men

LONDON (CP) — War Secretary Oliver Stanley told the House of Commons today he considered it undesirable to adopt conscription for men between the ages of 40 and 50 before younger men are called.

Mr. Stanley said the War Office had got the first news of the German invasion of Denmark between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning of April 9. He said the information was communicated to Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial General Staff, at 3.30 a.m.

The War Secretary declared one anti-aircraft unit in Norway was not in possession of the necessary recognition signals which, he said, "are of a very secret nature and would not be widely issued days in advance" of the British landing. One casualty resulted because of this, he disclosed.

Chamberlain Defends His Government in Noisy Session Allied Forces Now Ready for Clash on Any Front, He Says

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain today told the House of Commons that he believed "it was right to make the first attempt" in Norway and "equally right to withdraw the troops when it was clear the plan would not succeed."

The Prime Minister ascribed the failure of the Trondheim offensive in south-west central Norway to two things:

1. "Our inability to secure the airbases from which we could operate fighters."
2. "The rapid arrival of German reinforcements."

He said "we were helpless to prevent the German stroke" because Norway would not let British troops come in in advance of the German invasion.

He declared the Trondheim offensive was attempted at the desperate urging of the Norwegian government and because it appeared that if it was not tried, although it was "full of risk," that Norwegian resistance would at once collapse.

Mr. Chamberlain was cheered when he entered the House for the debate.

DISREGARDS SHOUTS

The Prime Minister, at first grave, broke into a smile as he acknowledged the cheers and ignored opposition shouts of "Who missed the bus?" and "Resign."

The shouts of "Who missed the bus?" referred to the Prime Minister's recent assertion that Adolf Hitler "missed the bus" by failing to loose a blitzkrieg on Britain in the earliest days of the war. Now, he said then, Britain is ready.

The diplomatic galleries were crowded. Halvdan Koht, the Norwegian Foreign Minister now visiting London, was present.

Mr. Chamberlain, answering a question, said he could not say when a secret sitting would be held regarding charges of "grave deficiencies" in Britain's fighting forces.

The Prime Minister rose amid loud cheers at 3.48 p.m. (6.48 a.m. P.S.T.) to begin the debate. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who will wind up the debate for the government tomorrow, sat beside the Prime Minister on the treasury bench.

Mr. Chamberlain began by paying tribute to the skill of the navy and army, which effected the withdrawal of the British forces from Namsos "in a single short night without loss."

Fifty German bombers attacked the troop convoy the next day, Mr. Chamberlain disclosed. He said "we should count ourselves fortunate that we did not lose more than one British and one French destroyer."

"The convoy was out of range of our fighters and we had to depend only on the ships' anti-aircraft fire," he told the House.

The Prime Minister declared the campaign in southern Norway is at an end.

"Whatever criticisms may be made about anyone else," he added, "I am sure that everybody will agree that the troops engaged in this campaign carried out their task with magnificent gallantry."

"In every respect, of man for man, our forces showed themselves superior to their foe."

Mr. Chamberlain said news of Britain's withdrawal had "created a profound shock."

A shout of "and still is" came from the opposition benches.

NO MILITARY DETAILS

The Prime Minister declared he did not propose to give an account of the military operations but to consider the criticisms of the action of the government.

"The ministers, of course, must expect to be blamed for everything," he said.

The Speaker, Capt. E. A. Fitzroy, warned the opposition, which was becoming noisy, not to interrupt.

Mr. Chamberlain said reports from Stockholm, "which have been invented by the enemy," had aroused expectations which were never justified, and "which were certainly never endorsed by any minister."

"I do not wish to extenuate anything," he continued. "At the same time I hope we shall not exaggerate the extent of the check which we have received."

ONLY 1 DIVISION

He said the withdrawal was "not comparable with Gallipoli," as not more than a single division was involved, and "our losses were not really great in numbers, nor was there a considerable or valuable amount of stores left behind."

German losses, he said, were far heavier "in warships, planes, transports and men."

"I am quite aware that the result is not to be measured merely in losses on the spot," he continued. "He said the fact must be taken into account that 'we have suffered a certain loss of prestige' and that color has been added to 'the false legend of German invincibility on land.'"

"We must accept that position for the moment," he declared, "but we need not help our enemies by making it worse."

Britain had received "most urgent appeals" from the Norwegians for an attack on Trondheim "at all costs," for it was "a place essential for the government and the king."

ALLIES COMMENDED

The Prime Minister lauded France for showing "remarkable steadiness" and said that in Britain the only effect of the reverse has been to stiffen our determination.

Turkey had remained "impenetrable," Egypt had strengthened her defenses, and "the position has been strengthened by the reversion to normal of our fleet distribution in the Mediterranean."

"The reaction has been more serious in Sweden than anywhere else," Mr. Chamberlain declared.

The Prime Minister expressed regret at certain comments "of a polemical character" in the Swedish press because, "although they may express Swedish disappointment, it does not help Sweden or the Allies."

Mr. Chamberlain said he had heard no criticism of the decision to send a force to Narvik, the far northern port, and assumed "our decision in that respect, at any rate, was generally approved."

"I am not going to pretend that in those first anxious days we foresaw everything that was going to happen," the Prime Minister said, in answer to a question "why did we attempt an expedition to Trondheim?"

"Although we shall give all the help to Norway that we can, and as soon as we can, we must not forget that there are other fronts which may at any moment blaze into a conflagration."

The Prime Minister warned that Germany, "with her vast and well-equipped armies," can at any moment attack "at a number of different points and that we want to be ready to meet that attack wherever it may come."

"I try to steer a middle course," said Mr. Chamberlain after remarking that "any minister who shows any signs of confidence is always called complacent."

At this point some opposition members again shouted "Missed the bus."

The Prime Minister said he did not wish to raise undue expectations or "make the neutrals' flesh creep by painting pictures of unmitigated gloom."

He said that "quite a lot of people" thought, "that when he said 'Hitler missed the bus' that he referred to the invasion of Norway."

Shouts of "of course you were" came from the opposition benches. Resuming, he declared that suggestions that one minister was more responsible for what happened than his colleagues were as "unworthy as they are untrue."

He said there were no divisions among the ministers and that no one had intruded against any other.

Hitler Failed
At Start of War

He said his "missed the bus" remark had been made after considering Hitler's preparations and wondering why Germany did not attack the Allies at the beginning of the war.

"It was a commentary on the past, not on the future," he added.

"We have learned many useful lessons" from Norway, the Prime Minister said, and again he warned the house against "being tempted into such a dispersal of our forces as might suit the purpose of the enemy."

He urged the nation to "be aware of jitters and divisions among ourselves" and warned that "presently we may be faced in the most violent form with attacks directed against this country."

Mr. Chamberlain declared this was not the time "for quarrels among ourselves," but that, although his military advisers had warned of the dangers of the present situation, "we could not accept this view in a democratic country" although it gives "hostages to fortune."

"If there is criticism, those who are criticized must be allowed to defend themselves, whatever the dangers may be," he said.

NO PLOTTING

"None of us has attempted to intrigue against the other. All of us have only one thought—that is how we may each of us make our best contribution to the winning of the war."

The Prime Minister announced that Mr. Churchill "will have special responsibility" for the supervision of military operations day by day.

Answering a question by David Lloyd George, he said "Mr. Churchill would retain his post at the Admiralty."

Personal Staff

Given Churchill

The Prime Minister said Mr. Churchill had suggested that it would help him as head of the military co-ordination committee of the cabinet if he could have close contact with the chiefs of staff.

He then disclosed that the First Lord will have "a small personal staff" under Major-General Hastings Ismay, secretary of the Imperial Defence Committee.

Answering a question put by Herbert Morrison, Labor, Mr. Chamberlain said this change did not arise out of the Norwegian operations "but would have been made in any case."

Mr. Chamberlain said other "changes in the form of the government, or the functions of individuals, might be necessary."

"In these strenuous days we should do better to occupy ourselves in increasing our war effort rather than disputing about the forms of government," he admonished the house.

The ships, the Prime Minister said, were needed elsewhere. The withdrawal from Norway "was due to our inability to secure the airbases from which we could operate fighters and, secondly, to the rapid arrival of German reinforcements," Mr. Chamberlain said.

The government had believed "that if our troops could get there, they would not suffer heavy casualties from the air."

"I believe it was right to make the first attempt and equally right to withdraw the troops when it was clear that the plan would not succeed," the Prime Minister declared.

Britain is doing "all we can to overtake the start Germany obtained during her long years of preparations," Mr. Chamberlain declared.

ASKS ALL CO-OPERATE

He added that he wanted the "wholehearted co-operation of members of all parties" as well as the "wholehearted co-operation of employers and workers."

"We do not set ourselves up to be faultless," he said. "We certainly do not set ourselves up as being above receiving help."

Concluding, he appealed to the house to put "all our strength into this work," to increase the nation's strength "until we ourselves are able to deliver the blows where and when we will."

Saskatchewan Inquiry

Big Theft Found
In Canteen Fund

REGINA (CP) — Restoration of the Saskatchewan canteen fund to the amount of $40,000 by the provincial government and appointment of a new board of trustees to administer it are recommended in the report of the royal commission which investigated shortages in the fund.

The report was issued today by Premier W. J. Patterson of Saskatchewan and placed responsibility for the shortages on two former trustees, now dead.

Mr. Justice Donald Maclean conducted the inquiry into the fund, established in 1925 to aid needy soldiers.

(Appointment of a new board of trustees for the canteen fund was announced April 11 by Premier Patterson. Those appointed were: Don B. Wilson, chairman, Regina; Frank Riches, Saskatoon; and Harold W. Pope, K.C., Moose Jaw.)

The commission report emphasized that while it recommended restoration of the fund by the government, it found no responsibility, legal or otherwise, on the Saskatchewan administration for shortages which it disclosed.

Regarding responsibility for the shortages, the report stated: "The evidence presented to the commission furnished — overwhelming proof of the guilt of two of the trustees, namely, Captain A. H. White and Dr. Charles Cox, acting singly and in collusion to defraud the fund."

Shortages in the fund were said by the report to have totaled $30,513 proved stolen and $8,447 strongly suspected as stolen. The total capital originally was $166,724 allotted under the federal statute of 1925 and increased by $8,930 by federal statute of 1928.

LITTLE LEFT

"The total was estimated to have been increased to approximately $210,000 by interest. Most of this money was disbursed and the annual fund report issued last year showed only a few thousand dollars remaining."

The first board of trustees was named by provincial order-in-council January 5, 1926 — Dr. Cox, Saskatoon, Col. James McCra, Regina, and Captain White, Regina, named to serve without remuneration for a period of three years.

The appointments were extended from time to time, the only change coming in 1931 when Col. McCra resigned and was replaced by Col. A. G. Styles of Regina.

Churchill would retain his post at the Admiralty.

Attlee Opposes Churchill Post

Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, opened the debate for the Labor Party. He described Mr. Chamberlain's preliminary statement of last Thursday, when the withdrawal south of Trondheim was announced, as "over optimistic and over-complacent."

He said Mr. Churchill was "far too optimistic."

The Norwegian campaign, he continued, was considered to be of "major importance" by the nation — not "a mere tip and run exploit."

He complained that the press and radio had led to the belief that "everything was going wonderfully well" and "because of great expectations, there is great disappointment."

Mr. Attlee charged that "young boys without training were sent to Norway" and said that experienced older men should have been sent.

INFORMATION NEEDED

It was "unbelievable," he said, that Germany's elaborate preparations should have gone on "for many months" without the British intelligence service knowing it.

"I am not satisfied, despite all the Prime Minister has said, that the present war cabinet is an efficient instrument for conducting the war," he continued.

"It was vital for us to secure air bases. The government could not have realized, even after the lesson of Poland and Finland, the importance of the air weapon or the vital importance of defenses against attacks from the air."

Mr. Attlee described the evacuation from Norway as "inevitable" and said "this does not alter the fact that the operation in southern Norway has been a failure."

SINCLAIR SPEAKS

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, continued the debate. He declared criticism should be levelled not at the Norwegian withdrawal, but at "why we ever got ourselves into a position in which we had to accept defeat in Norway."

There was nothing in the Norwegian campaign to shake the nation's confidence in the courage and efficiency of the fighting forces or of the availability of large resources, Sir Archibald went on. But there was something that suggested "that more foresight and energy, and stronger and more ruthless will to victory are required" of the government.

He stressed the economic importance of losing supplies from "Denmark, Norway, Finland and the other Baltic states," and warned the House that when Narvik is taken it will be found that the Germans have destroyed everything there.

DEMANDS RESULTS

The Liberal leader scored the "ill-founded boasts of ministers," and observed that "results count." Official information given to the press and British Broadcasting Corporation, he said, had misled those agencies. He did not criticize anyone for misleading the enemy during the period of the evacuation. The misleading had come before then. Reminding the House that "iron ore is the weakest point in the German armament," Sir Archibald said British action should have been taken months ago and not until a winter had nearly passed, when "the ministers screwed themselves up to action."

He suggested German air power had proved stronger than the government had anticipated.

"Had they learned nothing from Poland?" he asked.

TROOPS CONTRASTED

Sir Archibald declared the French had sent Alpine troops, among their best, while Britain had sent Territorials who "did not even have snowshoes."

The result, he continued, "makes one wonder whether the Finnish force really did exist on the scale of 100,000 men."

There were some cheers from the government back benches when the Liberal leader said Britain was falling to drive forward with "ruthless and war-minded energy" in all departments.

"Economically, politically and to a lesser extent, militarily we have suffered a grave reverse."

Sir Archibald remarked that "time is not on our side — Hitler has seized the old gentleman by the beard."

LACKED EQUIPMENT

The Liberal leader said he had been informed that at one place in Norway the British forces had landed two anti-aircraft guns with unsuitable mountings, no trained men to handle them, no fuses keys to set fuses, no range tables, and no trajectory charts.

"The guns were utterly useless," he remarked.

Sir Archibald said he was told of one transport which sailed with "no arms — not even a rifle and no splinter-proof protection — not even a tin helmet and no escort on the way back."

He charged that one ship carried a few wounded soldiers without medical supervision.

"Only three of her lifeboats could be swung outboard," he said.

Sweden, he went on, is now surrounded. He asked whether Britain could help her resist German pressure.

"The government are giving us a one-shift war while the Germans are giving us a three-shift war," he remarked.

"In every country of the world the prestige of Britain has been affected." Time is not always on our side. Let us insist upon a more vigorous policy in the conduct of the war."

MUST BE FREE

To Mr. Chamberlain's assertion that the military chiefs had cautioned against the war debate, Sir Archibald declared:

"Our debates must be absolutely free from any suggestion of military advisers or others outside as to how they should be conducted. If the military consequences of the defeat in Norway are not comparable to those of the last war, they are sufficiently unpleasant. We must face the facts and not hide our heads in the sand."

"Casualties were not negligible either. We lost warships, of which our prospective supply is insufficient. The other consequences, however, are much more serious."

Many members left the house for tea when Sir Archibald concluded his speech.

Sweden Determined Not to Surrender

STOCKHOLM (CP-Havas) — Sweden served fresh notice on her German and Russian neighbors today that she would not be intimidated into surrendering her independence and rights by the punishment dealt out to Norway and Finland.

The Social Democrats, organ of the powerful People's Party, bluntly protested any Soviet move to play the role of big brother and place Sweden under the "protection of bayonets." The pointed denial of Russian domination followed the emphasis placed on Swedish independence by Foreign Minister Kristian E. Guenther's statement confirming Berlin's announcement of an exchange of letters between King Gustaf and Adolf Hitler.

The Swedish sovereign's re-assertion of his country's determination to remain neutral was reinforced last night by a radio speech in which Gen. Arvik Eriksson, commander-in-chief of the Swedish armies, stressed Sweden's unrelenting grip on its independence. As disclosed here, Hitler's letter to King Gustaf offered assurance that Swedish neutrality would be respected.

He opposed Mr. Churchill's new appointment as "against all good rules," declaring that no man in charge of major strategy should also be in command of a division.

"I have no doubt whatever of the courage and constancy of the people of this country, provided they get the right leadership," he said.

DECISIONS TOO LATE

The people "were not satisfied that the war was being waged with sufficient energy, industry or results." He claimed that the men "responsible for the conduct of this war showed everywhere that they were too late."

The Prime Minister talked about missing buses, the Labor leader said. "The country missed all the peace buses that caught the war bus."

Mr. Attlee attacked the government for allowing loyalty to the chief government whip, Captain H. D. R. Margesson, to overcome "their loyalty to the needs of this country."

"The House of Commons must take full responsibility," he added. "We will win the war, but to win it we want different people at the helm than those at present leading us."

Mr. Attlee claimed that people were saying that those responsible for the conduct of affairs "are men who have had an almost uninterrupted career of failure."

"Norway follows Czechoslovakia and Poland," he said. "Everywhere the story is too late."

This statement drew opposition cheers.

SINCLAIR SPEAKS

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, continued the debate. He declared criticism should be levelled not at the Norwegian withdrawal, but at "why we ever got ourselves into a position in which we had to accept defeat in Norway."

Air Training

Civilian Pilots Get Preference

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian pilots will be given preference in selection of the several hundred civilian pilots needed as instructors for the 26 elementary flying schools to be established under the British Commonwealth air training plan, the Canadian Flying Clubs Association announced here today.

The association, with which are affiliated Canada's 22 amateur flying clubs, has opened a registry for qualified flying instructors. For the various schools, instructors will be drawn from the registry here as required.

No. 1 elementary flying training school is now under organization at the Malton Airport, Toronto, under direction of the Toronto Flying Club. A staff of 13 instructors for the Malton school already has been filled, but three other clubs are expected to set up elementary flying training schools shortly and others are to follow.

All instructor pilots in the elementary schools will retain their civilian status. The positions opened offer a chance of service on the "home front" for bush flyers, for veterans who need only a refresher course to regain their flying skill, and for scores of youths fresh from flying schools.

First preference will go to civilian pilots already holding transport department licenses as instructors. Second choice will be made from pilots of at least 100 hours' flying experience who are prepared to take the special 25-hour course necessary to qualify for an instructor's rating, and third choice from younger pilots who have not quite 100 hours of solo flying to their credit but are still in training.

The Transport Department recently lowered the instructors' minimum flying time from 250 to 100 hours.

Women pilots also may qualify as instructors, the association announcement said, though at present only one woman holds an instructor's license.

PRICE PACTS BARRED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON — "Price-fixing agreements are unlawful" under the 1890 Sherman Act, according to a decision of far-reaching importance given by the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Douglas delivered the five to two opinion that sustained a ruling of the Federal District Court at Madison, Wis., which held that 12 major oil companies and five individuals violated the Sherman Act by conspiring to control the price of gasoline in 10 mid-western states.

The oil companies contended they had engaged only "in a voluntary co-operative effort" to remove a "competitive evil—distress gasoline."

The justice department charged the defendants with conspiring to raise prices by concerted purchases of gasoline from independent refineries in 1935 and 1936.

ENDORSE ACTION IN GAS QUESTION

The Esquimalt Council last evening endorsed a recommendation from the president of the British Columbia Union of Municipalities that a resolution be sent advising the government of their views in reference to government control of gasoline, and to assure the government of municipal support.

The council endorsed the calling of a special session of the Legislature.

Resolutions from a meeting of Mayor Andrew McGavin and the Reeves of the three municipalities last week, supporting the government's action, were also endorsed.

During a brief discussion on the subject Councilor J. A. Christensen, a service station proprietor by trade, said there was a possibility that the gasoline supply would be shut off this week.

Philatelists Honor 'Penny Blacks'

A hundred years ago, when Queen Victoria had been on England's throne three years, the first adhesive stamp, known as the penny black, was introduced and became immediately so popular.

J. K. HODGES
Society Founder

At the dinner tables the guests found the menus decorated with attractive souvenirs of the original penny black, photographed by Dr. J. A. Pearce from the priceless stamp and envelope collection of Gerald A. Wellburn of Duncan, the society's president.

R. M. ANGUS

Hubert Lethaby proposed a toast to the "penny black," and said how unfortunate it was when the centenary came at a time when the British Empire was at war. With the toast he coupled the names of all the people of Great Britain, who were paying such a toll at the present time.

N. R. STEWART

Following dinner the guests inspected Mr. Wellburn's magnificent collection of stamps, one of the finest in the world. Mr. Wellburn's notations and descriptions, artistic settings and sketches were greatly admired, and the philatelists found them so fascinating it was difficult for them to leave. Mr. Wellburn today took his collection to Seattle to show to philatelists there, who are also celebrating the penny black centenary.

In his lecture, illustrated with photographs taken by Dr. Pearce, Mr. Wellburn told how postage was in use many centuries ago. In those days people wrote their letters and then folded and sealed them, because if an envelope were used the postage was double. In his collection is a document signed by Queen Elizabeth.

The adhesive stamps were hand printed until 1880, Mr. Wellburn said, and after that much of the beauty of the stamps was lost. Satisfactorily gumming the stamps proved one of the early difficulties.

"When one gets playing around with penny blacks, the game becomes almost a science," he said, "although stamp collecting is really only a pastime."

There were more than 3,000 types of penny blacks and because of this large number collection of them was most fascinating, he said.

Perforation of the stamps came in about 1854 and until then the men in the post offices used their spare time in cutting the blocks of stamps into strips.

Mr. Wellburn's lecture showed a surprising amount of research and study and is of great value

Arena Pledges At $34,000 Mark

Members of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the Victoria arena fund drive, were informed by the committee chairman, Ernest Harris, at their meeting last night that money was still being received for the project at the office in the Arcade building, the total now being close to $34,000. Exact figures $33,912.65.

Three resolutions were approved by the meeting for presentation to the annual convention of British Columbia Junior Chambers of Commerce in Kelowna on May 23 and 25. Two were sponsored by Thomas Watkins, the other by Thomas W. Sturges, president, who will represent the local organization at the interior convention.

That representations be made to encourage appointment of members of Junior Chamber of Commerce in non-paying civic and provincial commissions, was one of the resolutions from Mr. Watkins. He was of the opinion there should be younger representation on the commissions.

Members also endorsed his resolution regarding championing of a Dominion-wide move for the standardization of business invoices.

treatment to visitors who come to Canada this year, namely to urge that the official rate of exchange established by the Foreign Exchange Control Board of Canada be given by all merchants, was the resolution from Mr. Sturges. The president pointed out that Canada needed all the tourist dollars she could get to help finance her war effort. Unfair treatment to the visitors would considerably check the flow of foreign exchange coming in, he felt.

Mr. Chamberlain's Report

TODAY'S DEBATE IN THE BRITISH

House of Commons on the Norwegian campaign has added very little to what is already well known. Mr. Chamberlain believes "it was right to make the first attempt" to grapple with the German invaders in Norway and "equally right to withdraw the troops when it was clear that the plan would not succeed." He ascribed the failure of the Trondheim offensive to two things: 1. "Our inability to secure airdromes from which we could operate fighters." 2. "The rapid arrival of German reinforcements." The Prime Minister explained, however, that this part of the campaign was attempted at the desperate urging of the Norwegian government and because it appeared that if it was not tried, although it was "full of risk," Norwegian resistance would at once collapse.

Opposition leaders Attlee and Sinclair are not satisfied with the Prime Minister's account. The former complained bitterly that the general public was led to believe that "everything was going wonderfully well," and "because of expectations, there is great disappointment." What is still puzzling to the Labor chief is that Germany's elaborate preparations should have gone on "for many months" without the British Intelligence Service knowing of it. So, in spite of all the Prime Minister said, Major Attlee remains of the opinion that the present war cabinet is an inefficient instrument for conducting the war. Sir Archibald Sinclair drew opposition cheers as he said, "Norway follows Czechoslovakia and Poland; every where the story is 'too late'." He agrees that there is nothing in the Norwegian campaign to shake the nation's confidence in the courage of the fighting forces or of the availability of large resources, but there was something that suggested "that more foresight and energy, and stronger and more ruthless will to victory is required."

If it has done little more, so far, today's debate has brought the Norwegian venture out into the open. Mr. Chamberlain's commendable candor did not impart much that was pleasant to his observations and explanations. He evidently refuses to reduce the size of his cabinet—which The London Times and many influential advisers have urged him to consider. On the contrary, he asks that the position be accepted "for the moment" and that all refrain from helping the enemy by making it worse. Obviously as the discussion proceeds Sir Archibald Sinclair's detailed attack on the Prime Minister and the ministry will be studied by a British public that is not satisfied with an assurance that the Norwegian withdrawal is "not comparable with Gallipoli." Cheers from government back-benchers as the Liberal leader drove home his complaints, moreover, may or may not suggest more verbal pyrotechnics tomorrow. Ending his speech with the reminder that "the government are giving us a one-shift war while the Germans are giving us a three-shift war" should at least give Mr. Churchill a text for his contribution to the debate.

Ambiguous

OF CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANCE TO the people of Great Britain and perhaps to the Allied cause was Mr. Chamberlain's announcement in the House of Commons this afternoon that Mr. Churchill is hereafter to have "special responsibility" for the day-to-day supervision of British military operations. The Prime Minister explained the "new appointment" would insure that "when policies are decided on they will be followed up with promptness and energy." It is presumed Mr. Churchill will now become the government's campaign chief of staff.

Until some further explanation, in more detail, is forthcoming it is impossible to speculate on the precise nature of the new responsibility that is now to be added to that already resting on the shoulders of the First Lord of the Admiralty. It is difficult to believe the British public will be stirred to new heights of enthusiasm by an assurance that future policies, once "decided on, will be followed up with promptness and energy." This does not imply that matters of military importance have been prosecuted in an indifferent or dilatory manner or pigeon-holed. But the government should not be surprised if the layman regards the explanation of the "new appointment" as unfortunate, to say the least; not unfortunate, of course, for its promise but for its virtual admission of preventable weakness in the past. This may not be a fair estimate of the knowledge in the Prime Minister's possession which prompted the brief elaboration of the announcement of Mr. Churchill's new status.

The Times of London is far from satisfied with the present war cabinet. The Manchester Guardian continues to ask for one that can touch the nation's imagination, "command its spirit of self-sacrifice," and, generally, one that can "look ahead with cool, deliberate courage." It contends that nobody can pretend the present administration "answers to these needs." Perhaps the debate on the Norwegian campaign which began today will produce a good deal more than ambiguities.

What will the Allied troops find at Narvik when they have subdued the Nazi garrison still fighting there?

It Was Not to Be

EVEN AFTER SHE HAD CONCLUDED her distasteful peace with Russia, while still licking her wounds, Finland cast about her to see if there might be some chance of holding the Olympic Games on her soil in accordance with the arrangement made in happier times. But despite her own suffering, her gallantry, the condition of a Europe at war obviously made the project impossible, so the Finnish committee was compelled to cancel the games definitely and finally. This year, then, there will be no white-clad group of keen, eager young men and women standing in the bright sunshine to take once more the Olympic oath.

"We swear that we will take part in the Olympic Games in loyal competition, respecting the regulations which govern them and desirous of participating in them in the true spirit of sportsmanship for the honor of our country and for the glory of sport."

In this year of grace 1940 the keen young men of more than half the world are engaged in playing a grimmer game. They have been told that they are playing this game, too, for the honor of their countries. However that may be, it is already clear that for many, many thousands of them the prize is not some gay ribbon or bright medal, but the dark garland of death. It is because those games are not to be held this summer, and because that oath is not to be taken by the young men and young women, that we have reprinted it above. For though they have been temporarily set aside by a world intent on graver matters, those principles must not be forgotten.

The time will come, some day, when the world must remember "loyal competition." The time will come when "respecting the regulations" will not be a sign of weakness, but of strength. The time will come when the "true spirit of sportsmanship" will again have value for men who have had to forget it in the necessities of another very nasty game. And for "the honor of our country," things are being done today which perhaps people of a later time will not look upon as redounding much to anybody's honor. Therefore, in the thick international murk of 1940, to look so far ahead as 1944 seems impossible. Yet it will come, and perhaps one may even now dare to hope that when it has come the world will have remembered those words it cast aside in 1940—"loyal competition," and "regulations," and "sportsmanship," and "honor."

Good Work

ONE OF THE MANY FINE ACHIEVEMENTS accomplished by our neighbor's Civilian Conservation Corps is that which has taught 80,000 young men to read, boys who were, to all intents and purposes, illiterate before they received "camp tuition."

It is revealed that approximately three boys out of every hundred registering for the camps were unable to read. Using special books designed for young men rather than children, the camp instructors have been able to teach such boys to read a newspaper and to write ordinary letters within three months. Some were able to write letters home within two months.

It may be embarrassing to think that somehow these 80,000 young men evaded the United States public school system without getting the most elementary preparation for life—the ability to read and write. But better late than never, and the CCC has a right to point with pride to another feather in its cap.

Once a world champion, a master says he has not touched a chessman in 14 years. One should not lose patience, though. He may move any month now.

The Scottish National Library at Edinburgh adds space for 100,000 additional books, as a war is on and one can't begin too soon to make room for the memoirs.

Spinning wheels are coming back, but there is difficulty in finding people who can run them. Life would be happier if progress didn't make those quick stops and then slide downhill every so often.

LARGEST TAX LEVY From Toronto Star

Canada's income tax collections (personal, corporation and special 5 per cent tax on interest and dividends) rose from $61,400,000 in 1934 to $142,000,000 in 1939, and then dropped $7,500,000 to $134,500,000 in the fiscal year 1940. There has been no announcement as to how this sum was made up, but, judging from earlier years, about one-third of it was personal income tax. Of this, in turn, over one-third is annually provided by less than 400 persons with incomes in excess of $50,000. In the latest year of record, they numbered 382 and paid more than $14,000,000 in taxes.

The income tax in all its branches is now the Dominion's largest levy. In 1939 it exceeded the sales tax by about $20,000,000, and will still have the lead when the figures for 1940 are announced. In that year (which ended with March), Canada collected close to $100,000,000 in customs taxes, nearly $159,000,000 in excise taxes (including sales tax and others), nearly $63,000,000 in excise duties (liquors and tobacco), and $134,500,000 in income taxes—that, of course, does not exhaust the list of federal receipts. Customs collections increased $21,800,000, excise taxes $2,600,000, excise duties $12,400,000, but income tax fell off by $7,500,000.

The income tax now being paid to supply revenue for the fiscal year 1941 is due to show a substantial increase because of the 20 per cent additional levied as a war surtax. And the public may well expect increases in other taxation—perhaps a further increase in the income tax itself—when Parliament meets in May, and Col. Ralston makes his budget speech. A war which costs Canada over $1,000,000 a day cannot be financed without increased taxation as well as increased borrowing.

TRAGIC

SOME FELLOW in the United States is writing a best seller merely by piecing together bits from the ancient catalogues of Sears Roebuck. You can trace the whole history of America in this catalogue, which has been the housewife's friend and the farmer's comfort for generations. And the more you look at it the more you laugh, until you begin to see the true meaning of it, which is tragic.

The ancient fashions pictured in the catalogue, the incredible underwear for gents, the curious nether garments for ladies, the feathered hats and be-flowered smoking coats are easy to laugh at nowadays. They almost make you forget that the current ladies' styles are the most preposterous in history, while men continue to dress as if they were the products of a single machine, stamped out and distributed on a conveyor belt. And when, 10 years from now, some enterprising journalist digs up the current Sears Roebuck catalogue, or any current society picture in the newspapers, we are going to wonder how we could have been so dippy back in 1940.

But the thing, alas, goes deeper than that. In the old days the ladies wore laces and frills and flowers and corsets because they believed in them. The fluff and floss and glitter of that time was truly the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace. The blue ribbon represented a feeling for beauty. The frill showed the innocent faith within the heart. The feather was a badge of belief in something kind and gracious. The very bustle was the mark of a Christian heart.

But today the ladies are laughing at themselves. They don't believe in their silly hats. The corset is no longer an aid to culture but only to sex-appeal. The frill is worn without the least faith in anything. The blue ribbon no longer represents an inward felicity. The bustle is not the mark of a Christian heart. The same silly clothes are back again, but where they were worn in the old days of Sears Roebuck with a blush they are worn now with a leer. An age has died, a better age, with a Sears Roebuck catalogue clutched in its cold hand.

GEESSE

ACCORDING TO THE PAPERS, the wild geese have been moving north again, and people stand and crane their necks to watch them and listen to their hoking, and there is a secret envy in our hearts. Untroubled, they fly north in the spring to nest and rear their young, and untroubled, they will fly south in the autumn, utterly sure, where we are utterly bewildered.

But did it ever occur to you, watching the geese flying north these days, that by far the largest part of the life of this planet is quite untroubled by our wars and miseries? Only a very minor species in point of numbers is at war today. Only a tiny fraction of this planet's life is disturbed. Most of it is going on as usual, in perfect harmony, because it lacks our intelligence, and will go on as usual whatever happens to us. It is hard for us to realize it, but a visitor from another planet would find that all the affairs of this one, with a few minor exceptions, were progressing satisfactorily and peaceably, according to plan.

Take a look at the next goose you see, take a look at the next newspaper, and then try to tell yourself that you belong to the superior species.

THEY DIDN'T TELL

SOME ENTERPRISING LADS in Washington have just published an inside history of American foreign policy in the last two years and come to the conclusion that President Roosevelt's worst mistake was his refusal to tell the public all the facts from time to time. You would think that was a mistake peculiar to Mr. Roosevelt. Isn't it obvious by now that every government in the world has gone haywire because it never dared to tell the people the facts, never trusted the public? Always it was thought that if the thing could be hidden from the people, if they could be shielded from shock and panic and everything disagreeable, somehow we would come through all right. And we didn't come through all right.

But if the governments of the world had told us long ago what they knew, the growing might of Germany, the cynical attempt to turn it eastward at somebody else's expense, the Japanese war fought on our metals, the utter unpreparedness of our own country for anything, the statesmanlike heads buried in the sands across the world's desert—if they had told us, we might have acted differently and earlier.

The truth is, of course, we didn't want to be told, not really. We kept our heads in the sand, too, until they started to pull out our tail feathers. We are only beginning to face the facts, now that we have hardly a feather left, but no thanks to the statesmen. Generally the public everywhere pulled its head out before the statesmen, but they kept smoothing down the tattered plumage, and talking about Santa Claus.

THE WILL TO WIN

AMONG the stinging lessons which the Nazis administered to us in the Norwegian campaign was the reminder that there is nothing quite so demoralizing in war as the defensive psychology. You cannot win wars if you let the other fellow keep you on the defensive all the time. This has been true all down through history and is more true now when the radio, and other modern devices, have made bombardment of nerves quite as effective a weapon as bombardment of cities.

No theory got quite so staggering a body blow in Norway as that of the modern British strategist, Captain Liddell Hart. It was Hart who wrote several books about the last war, in which he proved beyond all shadow of doubt that in the last war the various powers had harmed themselves far more than they had ever been harmed by the enemy by most of their own offensives. Passchendaele of course was the most horrible example.

Yet Captain Hart overlooked another factor which weighs at least as heavily as the arguments he set forth. That was that it was the will and power to launch an offensive when it proved decisive that won the war. That was not only true in 1918 but it was also true in the recent Fascist conquest of Spain. The republican militia and the international brigades could fight on the defensive with as much courage and devotion as had ever been shown in any struggle. It was all offset when the Italians and the Germans were able to lead the Spanish Moroccans and rightists in a large scale attack. The Finns also inflicted some wonderfully spectacular defeats on the Red armies before the decisive stage in that war. But it was the ability, and power to deliver an attack when it was decisive that ended that war, as all others before it.

In the days of Byng the Canadian corps developed a fighting philosophy which ruled through to the end. It was to give the ### enemy no peace.

It was to keep him nervous and guessing just where would be the next blow. That policy might have proved merely annoying to the Germans except in the later major battles. But it was all-important from the standpoint of the Canadians themselves. It kept them certain that they were at least just a little better than the fellows they had to fight. So it was with all that part of the British army which was worth its salt.

ABOUT SIX MONTHS before Munich I attended an international conference on world affairs. I heard one English professor defend the policy of appeasement, that is, of throwing "poor relations" to the wolves of aggression. Like every body else he figured that war was inevitable. But he thought that Britain could fight a limited liability war, and that a partial defeat would do neither her nor the world very much harm.

It is that sort of thinking which is our deadliest enemy in this war, and of the larger struggle of which this war is but one battle. What is going on today is a life-and-death-struggle between three forces. Communism is a militant contender for complete world rule, and has made even more progress towards that end than has nihilism under Hitler. There may or may not be an enduring synthesis between these two formerly opposing forces. But both of them are strong, ruthless, ingenious, unscrupulous and above all, aggressive.

In the long run we cannot beat either of them, let alone both together, unless we fight with positive and not negative weapons. That means raising armies trained to attack and adequately equipped to attack. But it means even more fighting on the civilian front with facts and ideas which penetrate right to the homes and very hearts of the people. If conditions in our own countries have not been and are not the kind of conditions which sensible men will die to keep for their children the lesson is obvious.

How Penny Postage Came 100 Years Ago

By BETTY HUGHES

The innocent fraud of a young Scottish girl, who, with the help of her fiancé, devised a scheme to beat the exorbitant postage rates that the receiver of a letter had then to pay, was the unwitting instigator of Rowland Hill's momentous postal reform. It was because of an incident in the Scottish highlands while the mathematics professor was on holiday, that the idea of the penny postage, which this week celebrates its 100th birthday, was born.

One morning in 1838, Rowland Hill was standing by while the post-boy was distributing letters and parcels. Also waiting, with eager expectancy pictured on her face, was Mary, the red-haired maid at the village inn. Expectancy turned to joy when a large envelope was handed her. She scanned the envelope carefully, but then returned it to the post-boy.

"I must return the letter to you," she said. "I haven't the money to pay the postage."

Rather than see the girl disappointed, Rowland Hill offered to pay the dues for her. When she protested, saying it really was not necessary, he paid no attention, for he thought it was her modesty that caused her to object.

"But don't you want to read my letter?" he asked when he saw her put it in her pocket. "Of course not," she replied, "I have already read it!"

NEW SYSTEM

At his look of consternation she took out the envelope, cut it, and drew out a blank sheet of paper. Then she explained, "My fiancé is serving with the colors in Wales. He writes me every week. I would have to pay two shillings and sixpence (fifty cents) every time I got a letter. But this is almost as much as my weekly wage. So we worked out a code system. A little circle around the initials of my name means 'I love you,' the name of the sender underlined means 'Things are not going very well,' a small cross in the left corner indicates the contrary and so on. That makes it possible for me to return the letter to the post-boy after having read it without paying a cent. And thanks to this excellent system I receive news from my fiancé every week." "It is indeed a fine idea," agreed the astounded Rowland

ON ECONOMIC WARFARE

Lord Strabolgi in the Christian Science Monitor

Economic warfare means the use of British and French financial power to buy goods which Germany otherwise could purchase in certain markets. To take only one example: If Russian manganese can be bought by the Allies for good money it won't reach Germany. There will be no actual starvation of the German population because enough food-stuffs of a kind will always be available. But a general economic collapse will be hastened and the German war front weakened through a lack of essential raw materials. In the meantime French and British air strength will be growing fast. The position may be reached when the mere threat of mass air action against legitimate military objectives will bring about a change of government in Germany or force the existing government to sue for peace. Or it may be that mass air action will have to be used, probably in reprisal.

Germany can do much mischief at sea by submarines, mining, raids on trade routes; but falling altogether the arrival of unforeseen and almost impossible events she cannot win actual command of the sea in order to enable her to reverse her present position.

Sea power alone won't win this war, but it will make it possible for air power—which is only an other form of military warfare, and which also operates on land—to bring about a final defeat.

CHRONOLOGICAL ODDITY

From a letter to The London Times

In connection with six of our wars in the last 100 years a formula can be used with very remarkable and interesting results. The first year of each is that of the date of the previous peace with the addition of its digits—China, 1839-1842; Indian Mutiny (1842-1, 8, 4, 2), 1857-1858; Egyptian, 1880-1881; South African, 1899-1902; Great War, 1914-1919; the present war, 1939, which it is to be hoped is the end of the curious sequence.—Rev. H. M. Larner, Eastbourne.

B.C. Active in Ambulance Work

"British Columbia, pro rata population, is undoubtedly the most active province in our work in the Dominion of Canada," said Col. A. E. Snell, C.M.G., D.S.O., O.S.T., director of Ambulance of the St. John Ambulance Brigade at Ottawa, when he spoke before 180 guests in Spencer's private dining room at a banquet sponsored by the local brigade last night.

Col. Snell, on his fifth annual tour of inspection through Canada, told members and guests about the work done by the St. John Ambulance Association in the Dominion during the past few years, giving special praise to the British Columbia division.

"An increase of over 40 per cent, or about 2,500 members in this province, has brought her to the head of the list. Keep up the good work. Quebec was the only province that fell behind last year, although it had enrolled about 7,700 juniors. During the past two years our work in the Dominion has doubled," said the speaker.

"When war broke out there was a marked increase in the home nursing field. It is quite true that the war has been responsible for this increase, but even before it had started recruits volunteered in the first aid work in large numbers."

MANY READY TO SERVE

"Many have applied to serve in the cause of the war in V.A.D. and A.R.P. work, and although we appreciate their willingness to serve, we cannot place them, as England has not the need for such services at present. Many of our members in the eastern provinces have completed courses in this work, as A.R.P. work is more necessary and is compulsory. In British Columbia, A.R.P. work comes under the Department of Pensions and National Health."

Col. Snell, in concluding his address, emphasized the importance of maintaining a high standard in St. John Ambulance work. He also said that he would like to see the Victoria cadet movement make as fine a showing as the Vancouver group, which had enrolled 65 boys and girls since its organization.

Col. Snell was introduced and thanked by G. H. Stevens, president of the British Columbia Council of the St. John Ambulance Association, who presided over the meeting from the head table.

Before leaving on his tour of inspection of the local ambulance unit, Col. Snell presented medals to Richard Colwell and Stanley Crook, and labels to Robert Barnes, E. J. Harwood, J. C. Stood, A. M. Jarvie, R. A. Clark, W. R. Gibbs, G. Sellers, J. Carmichael, P. Jarvie, B. Lillie, G. Wilkinson and E. G. Beasall.

Guests at the banquet included: R. W. Mayhew, M.P. elect for Victoria; Col. Lavell H. Leeson, Provincial Commissioner of St. John Ambulance Brigade; T. W. Parsons, Commissioner of Provincial Police; Col. J. T. Clarke, former Director-General of Medical Services for the combined military forces of Canada and later Director of Ambulance for the St. John Ambulance Association; Mrs. C. E. Wilson; Lieut. Col. A. L. Jones, D.M.O., now on active service.

INSPECTS UNIT

After the banquet Col. Snell, accompanied by Col. Leeson, inspected the local ambulance unit and took the salute in the march past the Victoria headquarters, 534 Broughton Street. A smart display was given by the volunteers in every phase of ambulance work. Nurses, men and cadets, about 115 in all, lined up as they were inspected in stretcher work, first aid work and other lines covered by the association. Inspection of the women's division in nursing was carried out and particular interest was shown in the cadet corps. Col. Snell praised the work of the local volunteers as he spoke briefly after the inspection.

Munro, Webb, Bridge Champions

If the Gyro Club's public bridge tournament attracted the best recent months, then William Munro, 1226 Hampshire Road, and Robert Webb, 324 Stannard Avenue, are the best bridge players in Victoria today.

In a story book finish to a most successful tournament, Munro and Webb last night defeated B. P. Schwengers and Major D. A. Hogg in the finals of the tournament by the narrow margin of 240 points after playing 32 hands in three and a half hours. Total scores were 4,300 to 4,060.

The most enthusiastic follower of the Culbertson pastime could not have written a more dramatic finish for the tournament.

In the terms of the vernacular it was a ding-dong battle from start to finish and regardless of the fact a $50 cheque awaited the winning team it was a grand bridge game in any man's country.

It was, in a sense, a battle of age versus youth for Mr. Schwengers and Major Hogg were considerably senior to their opponents in the matter of years—but in the matter of bridge playing you can take your choice.

In the consolation round, for players who were knocked out in the first round of the tournament, J. V. Bodington and S. K. Fitzpatrick scored an easy win over a lead of 940 points with scores of 1,410 to 470.

patrick scored an easy win over a lead of 940 points with scores of 1,410 to 470.

EVERYBODY TENSE

The tension of the last round of the championship game was evident among every one of the many bridge followers who witnessed the closing hands. During the playing of the hands one could have heard a pin drop in the salon of the Dominion Hotel, and after each hand there was a general sigh and whispered discussion as the kibitzers freely discussed how they might have won the hand or set their opponents.

But few there were who claimed they could have played the last hand as did Mr. Munro after he and his partner got the bid at four hearts.

At this stage Munro and Webb were 180 points behind and their opponents were already game in on the final rubber. If the rubber was not completed it meant Schwengers and Hogg would collect 300 for their odd game and win the tournament. Munro and Webb needed the game to hold their margin.

After playing the hand like a master, Munro, with his brother Jim standing behind him as an ardent kibitzer, rose to the occasion and fondly kissed the last card before he tabled it. It was the four of diamonds and the 13th diamond out, taking the final trick. They collected 300 and 120 below the line which spelled victory.

CANNY BIDDING

Opening play in the championship round was decidedly in favor of Munro and Webb and it appeared they would have little trouble in holding the early advantage of over 900 points which they gained in the first eight hands.

The first score went to Schwengers and Hogg. Schwengers passed and his partner opened the bidding with a spade. Schwengers replied with one no trump and everybody passed. He made four no trumps for 40 below the line and three overtricks worth 90.

Then Munro and Webb started to get the cards which gave them their early lead. In the second hand Webb opened with a club, Munro replied with a diamond, Webb gave him three clubs and the bidding closed on Munro's game bid of three no trumps. He made a small slam.

The conservative bidding was still in evidence during the third and fourth hands, both of which were won by Munro and Webb. On the third hand Munro and Webb bid two hearts and made four, Munro playing it. On the fourth hand he made the first rubber with a three spade bid.

At the end of the first eight hands Munro and Webb enjoyed highest made bid of the first round was Munro and Webb's five clubs. Immediately following they bid a little slam in hearts, but were set one trick. This was the only slam bid of the evening.

As the second round started, luck began to change for Schwengers and Hogg. By clever bidding they managed to make their opponents over bid, while the older men made every bid count to steadily overcome their deficit.

At the end of 16 hands Schwengers and Hogg had recovered and enjoyed a lead of 180 points with scores of 1,780 to 1,600.

From then, throughout the third round, their margin increased, and it appeared they were headed for victory. As the cards had been against them in the second round, so they turned in their favor during the third and at the end of 24 hands the older men enjoyed a lead of 3,190 to 2,200.

It was during the last round that the see-saw began to teeter in favor of the winners. After being nearly 1,000 down they pulled back gradually, making the most of every hand in which they were able to get the bid and setting their opponents once or twice for dearly-needed points.

MEN BEST BRIDGE PLAYERS

The consolation round was a different story. Bodington and Fitzpatrick won the first hand, from Mrs. Squires and Mrs. Perrier and kept steadily increasing their lead from their early advantage. As in the championship round, however, early play was marked with conservative bidding.

In the first hand Bodington and Fitzpatrick finished with 60 on for two spades bid and made. At the end of eight hands they were leading the ladies by 1,100 to 410.

At the end of the second eight hand round, they had increased this margin to 2,340 to 690. In the third round it jumped to 4,300 to 910, this margin being maintained to the last hand.

At the close of the evening's play R. A. Lipsey, who, with R. L. Chaloner and Waldo Skillings, acted on the club's committee which arranged the tournament, presented the prize cheques and decks of playing cards to runners-up. He expressed the club's thanks to all who participated, and hoped the next tournament in the fall would attract even more entries.

Runners-up in the championship round were Mrs. S. T. Schl and Mrs. J. Gorman and Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Law, and in the consolation round, J. B. Davenport and A. Stretton and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Clark.

The report of the recent regional conference held in Vancouver was submitted by Miss Dora Atkins, the Victoria delegates as well as regional secretary, the report being read by Miss Jones. ## Jubilee Juniors Make Gifts to New Wing

Although construction has only been started on the new wing of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, its Junior Auxiliary has been working for some time in its interests and yesterday voted $290 towards a sterilizer and Frigidaire for the milk room of the new wing and, in addition, the sum of $376 for a four-bed semi-private women's ward for the new wing, Miss Vida Shandley, the president, was in the chair.

REPORTS

The decorated table display was pronounced a great success and thanks extended to Mrs. Carl Pfehder, Mrs. W. Munro and Mrs. Conway Parrott, who headed the committee representing the auxiliary in connection with the display, which was held in co-operation with the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club.

For the visiting committee, Mrs. A. C. Fitcher reported that 28 hospital and eight home visits had been paid; Mrs. R. B. Horton reported five diet cases carried on; Mrs. Joan Jameson told of the progress of the showcase committee and announced that the next meeting will take the form of a picnic on May 17. Mrs. Parrott reported that the sewing committee had completed a layette.

MAGAZINES NEEDED

Mrs. Gonnason made an urgent appeal for magazines, especially of the pictorial type, which are in demand at the hospital. Anyone having magazines to dispose of was asked to get in touch with Mrs. Gonnason or any member of the auxiliary and they will be called for. Mrs. H. W. N. Moorhouse read the vocational report, showing that a good deal of useful handwork had been done by the patients, particularly in the soldiers' wards.

Mrs. Jack Gray reported that 10,200 pieces had been made by the bandaging committee and announced that in view of the urgent need for dressings, the weekly meeting will be held on Thursday morning during June, July and August. The Thrift Shop was reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

Miss McBride's social service report noted 12 home visits, boarding home care arranged for eight patients, seven patients given transportation and one layette given out.

The May business meeting of Assembly No. 5, Canadian Daughters' League, was held recently in the Shrine Hall. Owing to the absence of the president, Mrs. C. Jasper, who was attending the Provincial Council convention in Courtenay, the meeting was presided over by Mrs. H. S. Hewitt, vice-president. The members were gratified to learn that Mrs. R. H. McInnes, a member of No. 5, had been elected president of the British Columbia Provincial Council. Arrangements were made for the next meeting, when Mrs. M. B. Bray will have charge of the evening's entertainment. Refreshments will be served.

Clothespins Become Wartime Problem

LONDON (CP)—It's a "lovely" war for the British housewife. She wants to hang out the washing on the home front line but cannot because there's a scarcity of clothespins.

Apart from the few made by gypsies, they never were manufactured here on a large scale. Before the war 192,000,000 pegs were imported annually, mainly from Germany.

As if the pin question and planning family meals under rationing were not enough, isolated reports are at hand about makers of mouse traps experiencing a scarcity of wire. The trap-makers at Leeds face this difficulty due to the use of wire in making anti-magnetic mine apparatus.

Clothespins have been so scarce in many districts that women introduced "staggered" washing days and others used safety pins. To meet the difficulty a firm of spring manufacturers plans turning out 5,000,000 spring pegs a week. Due to labor costs, they may have to be sold at about sixpence (11 cents) a dozen compared with the old price of 12 wooden pegs for a penny.

Ontario's gold production in 1939 exceeded all previous records, with 72 mining companies reporting production.

City Council Topics

City Employees Get Wage Raises

Starting this month, 38 employees of the City Hall will receive wage increases ranging from $2 to $20 a month. Salary readjustments entailing expenditure of $2,381 of the $2,500 allocated to the special salaries committee by the council for that purpose this year were approved by the mayor and aldermen yesterday. Alderman Ed. Williams stated the sum left over would provide another $15 a month for other readjustments if members of the council thought such were in order among employees not touched by yesterday's raises. The amounts the various staff members received were withheld from publication, though members of the council received lists showing how the money was divided.

James A. Griffith, an insurance agent who thought he was getting less of the city's business than he deserved but who will get more than he thought he was allotted, will be told what he gets by the city's insurance broker. Under a misunderstanding of his allowance, Mr. Griffith sent the city a caustic letter suggesting that his premiums be given to some of the broker's personal friends. Alderman W. L. Morgan explained Mr. Griffith had not understood his own position, that he was to receive some more business and will get $99 out of it under the basic city rates now in force.

Purchase of a power motor with various attachments from Scott & Peden Ltd. at a cost of $612 was authorized on the parks committee's recommendation.

Victoria's Transportation

Question of Change To Be Debated in Council

Alderman Archie Willis' motion calling on the City Council to shelve all negotiations for replacement of the existing street car system with a new form of transportation until the end of the war was tabled by the council yesterday afternoon for full debate at the civic body's next meeting.

When the issue comes up for discussion the council will resolve itself into a committee of the whole to permit public bodies to express their views on the question.

When the matter came up as unfinished business, Mayor McGavin stated the pressing emergency of the gasoline strike had occupied his time and he had been unable to call a meeting to discuss the street car proposal. He suggested a committee meeting could be held this week.

Alderman Willis called for open discussion in council, declaring the question one of public interest.

Alderman W. L. Morgan moved the subject be left over for consideration by the council in committee. Alderman Ed. Williams seconded the motion, suggesting public bodies had shown interest in the question and might want to attend to express their views.

WANTS OPEN MEETING

Alderman Willis asked the proposer of the motion why he called for a committee session.

Alderman Morgan replied he had favored that action since the existing agenda was long and a committee meeting would be devoted entirely to the question.

Alderman Willis presented an amendment to have the matter aired in general council.

Mayor McGavin stated he was quite willing to follow such a course. He was surprised, he said, that more of the general public did not attend the council meetings to learn what the mayor and aldermen were doing.

Alderman Morgan again stated the committee session had been suggested to permit the public bodies to be heard.

"I'm not looking for any holes in which to crawl to debate this question," Alderman Williams added, stating he, too, had supported the committee session to permit expression of public views on the question.

Alderman John Worthington also asked that delegations be given a chance to speak.

Alderman Morgan remarked he had intended that any committee meeting would be open to the public.

Alderman Willis' amendment carried unanimously.

OUTSIDE VIEWS

Letters from the Chamber of Commerce supporting the move to shelve the transportation question for the duration of the war and form, the Veterans Sightseeing and Transportation Company were read. The latter stated the effect of the war did not influence that company's offer to provide a better system than that now operating at no increase in fares. It analysed the question to some extent, outlining the extra taxation the federal government would receive from a bus company and stating that capitalization of the company could be cared for largely on a contribution of eight cents a year by each of the 70,000 people in the Greater Victoria area for a period of 10 years. The company's letter also stated its gasoline supply was assured and that inability of United States companies to ship as much gas to Europe, owing to war conditions, tended to assist rather than hamper the flow for local consumption.

Letters received from various individuals.

SOOKE

SOOKE—A garden party was held at "The Nook," residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory-Smith, Saseenos, last Thursday afternoon in aid of the funds of the Canadian Red Cross Society. The affair was given by the Sooke Unit, the sum of $60 being realized. Winners of prizes were: Mrs. E. Foster, Miss D. Cogswell, J. Walker and Master E. Constant, with Mrs. F. C. Rumsby in charge.

To Hear Protests On Street Names

That small but vocal minority which objects to the manner in which the City Council, on the recommendation of the inter-municipal committee, altered certain street names in Victoria, will be given an opportunity to voice its grievances to the committee.

When they have spoken their pieces, the committee will bring in a report to the council which certain members of the civic body hope will be final.

Debate on the question opened yesterday afternoon with a letter from W. T. McKibbin and four others protesting the change in the name of McKenzie Street.

Alderman W. L. Morgan entered the fray with a request that Rockland Place, a lane off Rockland Avenue, be allowed to retain its old name instead of Northumberland Road, a name which, he mentioned, contained 19 letters and used up a lot of paint. Alderman Morgan is chairman of the finance committee.

"When we heard the committee's final report we asked if there were any complaints. Now comes this aftermath," said Alderman J. A. Worthington somewhat sadly.

Alderman B. J. Gadsden again rectified the history of the name-changing campaign. He explained the difficulty which forestalled a representation by Mr. McKibbin when the Carrick Streeters were voicing their opposition. He told the council he and Mr. McKibbin were old friends, "had played ball together on the rifle range."

"With rifles?" asked the mayor.

Immediate painting of street signs required by the new parking by-law will be carried out at an expenditure of $600 on the recommendation of the public works committee.

The Kinsmen Club's request for financial assistance for the boys' band and sponsors was referred to the celebration and parks committees for a recommendation.

PERSISTENT CRITICS

Alderman Ed. Williams paid tribute to the persistency of the citizens objecting to the changes. He said the council had agreed to the switches on the recommendation of the intermunicipal committee, the chairman of which, he added, had told the aldermen: "everyone was satisfied." Amendment of the by-law was possible to meet the wishes of the residents. "I respectfully suggest they amend it," he said to the committee.

Alderman R. A. C. Dewar stated the changes had been put into force mainly at the request of post office and fire department officials, who found duplication and similarity in the sound of names a considerable handicap. No member of the committee had an axe to grind on the job, he said.

Alderman Morgan stated the question was not a big one. He thought the committee should bring in a report ironing out the trouble.

The committee should be congratulated on the small number of protests, Alderman Williams said, urging that all complaints be referred back to the committee and given attention.

LIBRARIANS OF B.C. MEET HERE MAY 13

Librarians from all over the province will gather for the 29th annual meeting of the British Columbia Library Association at the Empress Hotel on Monday, May 13.

John S. Richards, executive assistant librarian of the University of Washington, Seattle, will be the guest speaker. His subject will be: "Why and How Should Librarians Associate." This will follow the registration of members, the first item of the afternoon session, and will in turn lead to a round table discussion and question period.

The morning session will be devoted to the presentation of committee and special reports, business arising from them and to the remarks of the president, Dr. Kaye Lamb, provincial librarian and archivist.

The luncheon will be informal and the dinner at night, at which there will not be a speaker, will be followed by an entertainment.

There are now over 100 members of the association, and an interesting and informative meeting is anticipated.

EARTH AFFECTED BY SUNSPOTS

"Sunspots have a direct effect on the earth. They are sources of ultra-violet light and electrical particles which are sometimes far-reaching in their effects on this planet," Dr. R. M. Petrie, astronomer connected with the staff of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, told members of the Gyro Club at the Empress Hotel yesterday.

Dr. Petrie, speaking on "Sunspots and Their Influences," explained the relationship between these solar storms and actual occurrences on earth.

"Sunspots move across the sun's disc in regular cycles, each cycle requiring about 11-13 years to complete itself. Galileo was the first man to describe and observe the spots, which are nothing more than great solar tornadoes, with velocities reaching 3,000 miles per hour. They range in diameter from 500 miles to 40,000 miles," said the speaker in describing the spots.

The spots are black and are much cooler than the rest of the sun's surface, reaching temperatures of only 4,000 degrees, comparatively cool in relation to other solar figures.

In explaining the effects of sunspots on the earth, Dr. Petrie mentioned the display of aurora borealis, or northern lights, which usually accompanies a sunspot cycle.

"Auroral lights are explained very simply to the layman," he said. "Electrical particles and ultra-violet light from the sunspot strike the earth's atmosphere at high altitudes where pressure and temperature are low, and break down the atoms and molecules in this upper air. These particles, affected by the earth's magnetic field, move towards the poles, where they collide with other particles and start to rebuild. The lights which you see are caused by released energy during the building-up process of the particles."

Dr. Petrie predicted better radio reception within the next year, as the sunspot cycle diminishes.

A. R. Minnis, president of the club and chairman of the meeting, thanked the speaker on behalf of the members.

Divorces in British Columbia totaled 45 during April as compared with 34 the previous month. In 26 cases wives were granted decrees.

... BANKING FOR THE BUSINESS WORLD ...

Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

Great projects, lesser undertakings, humble business beginnings—all have shared in the banking co-operation afforded ever since 1817 by the Bank of Montreal.

And in this swift-moving day we are abreast of business, as it speeds into tomorrow on all-metal airplanes, streamlined trains, swift ocean ships and amazing highway motors.

Unchanged in its basic character of co-worker with Canadian business and safe dependable banking ally, the Bank has merely altered the speed of its service to keep pace with changing business.

We did our banking part in the canal-boar and stage-coach era; we are doing our part in the present-century business and industrial development of the Dominion, and we are prepared to meet the increased service demands to be expected in tomorrow's world of business. We are always pioneering.

Business executives are cordially invited to talk about their banking needs with the manager of any of our 500 branches.

DIFFICULTIES of the New York Yankees, world baseball champions, so far this season, stress the importance of Joseph Paul DiMaggio.

This is DiMaggio's fifth season with the New York club, which has won from 99 to 106 games a year and four world championships. . . boom! boom! boom!—just like that . . . since the clouting Italian reported in 1936.

Just before DiMaggio showed up, the late Colonel Ruppert told Joe McCarthy he was tired of running-second.

The proud outfit had three finished in the place position . . . additional evidence that DiMaggio is the difference.

Because of injuries, illness and holdouts, DiMaggio has yet to start a campaign with the Yankees, and this isn't the first time they bogged down without him.

A prominent baseball critic recalls chatting with a veteran New York pitcher while DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig were holding out in 1938.

He asked the hurler if he believed the Yankees could win if Gehrig stayed out and DiMaggio came in.

"Sure, pop," he replied, without giving the matter a thought. "Babe Dahlgren would hit well enough and plays a fine first base."

I then asked if he believed the team could win if DiMaggio remained out and Gehrig came in. "I'm not so positive," he hesitated, and he quickly ran out of fingers counting off-handed games accounted for by Jarring Joe's individual brilliance.

"That home run off Bob Feller in the ninth . . . plumb into the left field stand of that big Cleveland Stadium, etc., etc."

The old-timer agreed Bill Dickey and Gehrig were valuable, but there was no question in his mind as to just who was the Yankees' big boy.

Little wonder the Yankee bench was a row of serious faces when DiMaggio gave his teammates a report on his lame right knee after stopping off in Baltimore to have it examined.

A specialist diagnosed the injury as a torn, instead of a sprained, ligament.

There is no telling how long the greatest ball player alive will be on the sidelines.

The Yankees might not have been retarded to such an extent this spring had Jake Powell been available.

But with Powell in St. Petersburg, waiting for his fractured skull to heal, the Yanks presented to southpaws four left-hand batters in a row—Red Rolfe, George Selkirk, Charley Keller, and Dickey—and a fifth, Tommy Henrich, swinging seventh.

It wouldn't be so bad if the Yanks were bothered by left-hand pitchers only.

The answer to their trouble is Selkirk leading the club at bat with a roaring 269.

Henrich, subbing for DiMaggio in center field, is having an awful time hitting the ball out of the infield.

Six men were left on base in the first two innings against Ken Chase in Washington the other afternoon.

The Yankees don't miss Joe DiMaggio . . . and his big shillalah MUCH.

Winnipeg Hockey Star Passes Away

WINNIPEG (CP)—Jimmy Rae, 20-year-old Winnipeg hockey star who finished last season with Springfield Indians in the International-American League, died in hospital last night of complications which followed an attack of pleurisy.

Stricken two weeks ago, Rae was kept alive by blood transfusions donated by former teammates and friends, but his condition steadily grew worse.

Manager Mervyn (Red) Dutton of New York Americans of the National Hockey League was interested in Rae and was partly responsible for placing him with Springfield, an Americans' farm club. Dutton had intended to give Rae a trial with Americans next season.

Both camps express confidence of checking in with a victory.

The curtain was raised on the 1940 B section race last night, with Navy taking the measure of the Drydock squad, 13 to 11. At the end of the sixth frame the score stood in a 10 to 10 deadlock, but the sailors managed to get back on top again before the game's close.

Stan Clarke was chosen vice-president and George Beck Jr. will handle the secretarial and treasurer's duties during 1940. Ralph Clarke was named head of attendance committee and Les Vivian, publicity manager.

The junior group is composed of lads who are following in the footsteps of their father sportsmen to protect and conserve the animal and bird game supplies on the island. All of them are anxious to do "their bit" in this fine work to assure a future game supply.

Set for Opening

Ball Teams Clash

Arrangements are all complete for the introduction of the 1940 edition of baseball tomorrow night at Athletic Park.

Pitzer and Nex, last year's champions, and Tillicum Athletics, runners-up, who appear to be two of the strongest teams in this year's senior circuit, have been given the honor of bowing in the new season. They will face each other on the ball lot starting at 6.

Mayor Andrew McGavin, donor of the league trophy, which series opens tomorrow, will trot out to the pitcher's box and launch the first apple of the season down the "old alley." The gates will open earlier than usual and the teams are listed.

At Victoria West Park, last year's champion Eagles will oppose Tillicum Cubs, while Brown Bombers will be at home at Cedar Hill Athletics at Beacon Hill Park. Burton will umpire at Victoria West and Scroggs at Beacon Hill. Games start at 6.

Leafs Arrive In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Vancouver Maple Leafs arrived in Montreal last night in their hunt for a Dominion senior basketball championship after journeying leisurely from Winnipeg, where they defeated St. Andrew's last week for the western title.

The Maple Leafs, who start a best-of-five series with Montreal Y.M.H.A. tomorrow night for the Canadian crown, are under guidance of Joe Ross, tall centre, who is acting manager in place of Wally Mayers, unable to make the trip east. Ross reported all eight players in top shape.

"We took our time coming here so the trip didn't bother us a bit," Ross said. He added that the team came from Winnipeg via Chicago, where they attended a National League baseball game between Philadelphia and Chicago.

"The ball game was something new as most of the fellows have never seen a major league match, and it broke up the trip nicely," Ross said. "All the boys are in top shape and we're raring to get in there against the Y.M.H.A."

The seven other players accompanying Ross are Jimmy Bardsley, Art Willoughby, Ralph Henderson, Rann Matthison, Al Beaton, Sonny Watson and Milton Parsons. They worked out today for the game.

The team were guests of honor at a banquet tendered by the city last night.

BECHTEL-McMILLAN POST TOP SCORES

Dr. A. D. Bechtel and Wallace H. McMillan emerged victors in Victoria Skeet and Gun Club trophy shoots at the Albert Head Road shooting grounds on Sunday.

Dr. Bechtel broke 24 out of a possible 25 to head the shootery in the H. A. Humber trapshooting trophy competition, while Wallace McMillan bagged the top place in the C.I.L. Shield competition. To gain this, however, he had to shoot off with F. Munt, as they finished in a tie.

McMillan and Munt broke 22 out of a possible 25 birds, but in the two-gun shoot-off Mac beat Munt 20 to 15.

Dr. A. C. Bechtel	14	3	11

It was a different story in the second half. The Grads played like the teams of other years and there was no doubt about the outcome. They led 38 to 28 at the three-quarter mark and swamped the challengers 21 to 8 in the fourth session.

The crowd of only 940 fans saw Jean Williamson, Grad centre, lead the scorers with 15 points, two better than Etta Dann, diminutive guard for Edmonton. Forward Verna Briscoe was high scorer for Vancouver with 11.

The Vancouver squad lost the services of forward Nancy Roberts and guard Fay Burnham in the third quarter because of four personal fouls against each, but their presence would not have saved the coast team, as it definitely was on the run before the determined Albertans.

In the fourth quarter Verna Briscoe reached the four-four mark and left the game. Westerners were charged with 22 fouls, compared with eight called against Edmonton.

Teams and scores follow:
Vancouver—McKenzie 2, Hogue, Burnham 1, Wells 4, Briscoe 11, Gilles 8, Roberts 8, Anderson 2. Total, 36.

Edmonton—Northup 5, Brown 8, Williamson 15, Dann 13, Munt-McCloy 12, Gallen 4, MacRitchie, Bowden 2. Total, 59.

Officials—Referee, Ed. Tomick; umpire, Ray Campbell, both of Edmonton.

Reorganize Regina Roughriders Club

REGINA (CP)—Reorganization of the Regina Roughriders Football Club was under way today under a plan to place control in the hands of fans. The 30-year-old club sponsors a team in the Western Interprovincial Rugby Union.

At a week-end meeting it was decided to organize an energetic committee to canvass support by club memberships at $10 each, which entitle a fan to a place on the executive. These executives will meet next Monday night and render final decision, and the club will be in their control.

If enough support is obtained under the new plan, organization of the team will go on from there for the 1940 season.

Belgium Was "Captive" in World War

Soon after the 1914-1918 World War broke out, the German Kaiser and his generals took a step which hurt a little country in western Europe. The country was Belgium.

King Albert during the World War of 1914-1918.

A German message was sent to the Belgian government. "We want you to let our soldiers pass through your country," the message said in effect. "We do not want to make war on you, but simply desire to carry out our war against France."

Belgium replied: "You cannot go through our country."

The reply brought on an attack. The Germans had not expected to be told they could go through Belgium, and they were ready with full plans to cut across the country.

At that time the king of Belgium was 39-year-old Albert I. He had been giving much of his time to trying to bring about better laws in his country. With the outbreak of war, he took part in the command of the Belgian army.

On hot August days in 1914, German cannon pounded Belgian forts. The forts were strong, but the huge shells broke them up.

A part of Belgium was conquered, and German soldiers passed through into northern France. They hoped to capture Paris within a few weeks.

Shortly after Belgium was invaded, Great Britain entered the war. British troops were sent to France, and helped to hold back the German tide.

The World War lasted about four years and four months. It proved to be the worst war of modern times, and brought the deaths of millions of German, Russian, French, British, Australian, Canadian, Belgian, Italian and other soldiers. The United States entered the war in 1917, but American losses were not large compared to those of other major countries.

During most of the war, Belgium was held as a "captive country." Much of the land was in German hands, but Belgian soldiers kept on fighting to help the Allies.

After the war was over, Belgium built new forts. Their present defence system has been called "the Little Maginot Line," and has been compared to the big Maginot Line in northern France.

HOROSCOPE

Wednesday, May 8

Benefic aspects dominate today which should be fortunate for freedom of action and direction of policies by persons who exercise authority. The morning hours encourage initiative. It is fairly promising for those who sign legal documents.

Although the evening is favorable for girls interested in romance this is distinctly a man's day. The head of the household may be preoccupied and should be treated tactfully.

There is a sign read as inclining certain Europeans toward the re-establishment of monarchical government. Although the stars presage the fall of dictators there appears to be indication of reaction toward democracies. When peace is finally attained employment of discharged soldiers is to become an outstanding difficulty.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of events that are exceedingly instructive to both men and women. Success may be expected in financial matters.

Children born on this day probably will be definite in ambitions and determined in character. They may be reserved and reticent concerning personal affairs, but deeply interested in the welfare of their friends.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Can anything be done to help middle-aged women who have lost the joy of living, who feel that their lives are much harder than the lives of others, women who have imured themselves in their homes and refuse to leave them and yet feel that their homes are almost prisons? I am greatly concerned about my sister, who is like this. She is 55 years old—which is still young for these days—and in perfect health, yet she has simply dug herself into her own home and refuses to go out socially or even to do her own shopping. This is causing her to grow critical and fault-finding and tyrannical and unpleasant to live with. She supervises our every move and thinks that we should live as narrow a life as she does. When her own children were small her home life kept her busy and gave her something to think about. She is still trying to make her home sufficient for all her needs, and it is proving disastrous. What to do?

Answer: The only person who can help your sister is herself. Unless she can see the folly of her conduct and break the shackles of habit she has forged on herself her case is hopeless. But it is pitiful to think of a woman deliberately shutting herself away from all the pleasures she might have, for, in reality, the normal middle-aged woman who has done her task of rearing a fine family and seeing them launched in the world has come to the playtime of life.

But your sister's case shows how important it is for women never to lose sight of the fact that their children will be married and gone and that they must provide for themselves interests and occupations to fill their hands and hearts when their old occupations have been taken from them.

DOROTHY DIX.

With the Forces

Lovers Must Be Careful Too

All the world loves a lover except the censors. This seems to be an appropriate change for the old tag. When a soldier overseas writes back to his sweetheart—"My Heart's Last Beat"
... "My Darling Mabel" ... "To the Only Girl in the World" or whatever term of endearment he prefers he will be well advised to throw everything into the opening line for that may be all that gets by the censor.

Not content with a heavy blackout pencil which defies penetration either from the front or from the back when held up to a light the censor occasionally does a job with a pair of scissors. If the soldier has been particularly indiscreet in mentioning his whereabouts, number of troops in camp or anything else of a military nature his fervid epistle when it reaches his lady love may consist of two scissored pieces of paper. One will contain the opening, "Dear Mabel, you're the greatest girl in the world" and the ending, "Love, Jack," which may be very reassuring a couple of times but which lacks variety on frequent repetition. And, no doubt, to the feminine mind, the parts blacked out are the parts stirring the greater curiosity.

CHIEF NOW PRIVATE
A chief becomes a private in wartime. He is Chief Alexander of the Mohawks in peacetime,
but now he is Private Alex.
Belanger of E Company in Toronto's Royal Regiment.

Chief Alexander speaks five Indian dialects besides French and English. He is a crack shot and a champion canoeist.

The chief has some old Indian customs to use if the going gets tough. If he lost a rifle he could go after the enemy with a bow and arrow. He can pierce a 1-inch board with a flint arrow head.

The medical board held no terrors for him. His family has a record of longevity and hardiness. His grandfather from whom he inherited the title lived to the age of 109 and his grandmother to 101.

PROUD OF V.C.
An echo of the last war comes from Colonel Cy Peck, V.C., one-time member of the Legislature, now member of the pensions commission. The ferry boat to Salt Spring Island is named after this gallant veteran.

Interviewed in Toronto Col. Peck refused flatly to talk about how he won the V.C. but he admitted this—"It goes without saying, it's the greatest thing in my life."

Col. Peck was the only V.C.
member of a British Dominion parliament. He won his V.C. in the Canadian drive on Cambrai.
He did a dangerous reconnoitring job in no man's land, came back to set his troops straight and give the command to proceed with the attack, then ran under a hail of bullets to give new orders to a tank corps.

SCREEN STARS PLAN CANADA HOLIDAYS

OTTAWA (CP)—Hollywood motion picture stars, their favorite European playgrounds closed to them by war, are planning to spend their summer holidays in Canada, according to D. Leo Dolan, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau. Mr. Dolan is just home from Los Angeles and other Pacific Coast points.

Such prominent members of the screen colony as Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and Frank Morgan already have laid plans for Canadian summer holidays.

"There now is no doubt in my mind that we are going to have the greatest influx of tourists in the history of Canada," Mr.
Dolan said.

The novelty of visiting a country engaged in a great war and the fact that Americans obtain a substantial premium on their money in Canada, added to the natural tourist advantages of the Dominion, are among the factors expected to attract close to 20, 000,000 touring Americans during the season.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, who has jurisdiction over the travel bureau, has offered a shield to be awarded the junior chamber of commerce which, in the opinion of judges, makes the most effective effort to attract and entertain tourists.

Throughout the Dominion
these junior chambers are organizing entertainments such as pageants, musical presentations and other functions, and will act as unofficial hosts to visitors.

Assistance will be given the school board in presenting the annual May 24 school sports.

Use of Memorial Park tennis courts was given Hillier Tennis Club for coaching junior players.

Military authorities requested the use of Bullen Park by men of the Ordnance Corps for softball practice between 1 and 2 each day. It was decided to give the teams of the municipality preference in the use of the park. If the municipal teams do not want the park at the time the soldiers want to practice the request will be dealt with.

A motion by Councillor Frederick Eaton that the solicitor be instructed to prepare a resolution to be forwarded to the B.C. Union of Municipalities which would give the council more power in having objectionable buildings, other than those which were condemned, demolished, was passed.

ESQUIMALT ARGUES PROPERTY PRICES
The Esquimalt Council last night found itself in another real estate debate on receiving two offers to purchase property lower than the prices that had been set.
Both offers were turned down
after lengthy arguments.

Joan Fontaine and Reginald Denny stumble over a series of dramatic surprises in a climactic scene in "Rebecca," the du Maurier mystery thriller now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Fewer deaths from heart disease among young people are indicated by statistics in recent years, but the reason is not completely known.

An amendment by Councillor
G. R. Guillemaud to accept nothing less than the price which had been set, was passed with Councillors Albert Heald, Neil Fraser and Thomas Hadfield supporting.

C. Parkinson offered $50 for a lot on Wollaston Street. Councillor Eaton moved to accept the offer and Councillor Christensen seconded. The remainder of the Council voted against the motion.
Councillor Hadfield moved that the lot be sold for $75, which was the price surrounding lots had cost their buyers. Councillor Guillemaud seconded.

Councillor Heald made an amendment asking $100 for the
lot. There was no seconder.
Councillor Hadfield's motion carried with Councillor Christensen voting against because he felt that the $50 offer should have been accepted and Councillor Heald voting against because he felt that $100 should be the price of the lot.

One advantage of a windbreak is to conserve moisture for the field it protects—so agriculturists explain, adding that soil, like Monday's wash, dries faster in a breeze.

KILDARE FEATURE AT DOMINION

When the latest "Dr. Kildare" film opens today at the Dominion Theatre the audience expects a picture of suspense, dramatic surprises and thrills in a hospital's surgery room. There were no disappointments, for "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," fourth of this increasingly popular series, contains all this—and more too.

With Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore once more portraying the interne Dr. Jimmy Kildare and the great diagnostician, Dr.
Leonard Gillespie, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" revolves about the efforts of Ayres to help a surgeon perform a bungled operation. Dramatic moments such as a bird's-eye view of a delicate brain operation, plus the scientific handling of a madman in the convulsions of delirium.

RAYMOND MASSEY STARRED IN-PLAY

The distinction Raymond Massey, star of Robert E. Sherwood's play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which the Playwrights Company present at Royal Theatre on May 16, prizes the most is the honorary degree conferred upon him by Lafayette College. In presenting the degree, Dr.
Wm. Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College, paraphrased
Lincoln's address with the words:

"The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget that by your art you have deepened our affection for Abraham Lincoln."

CAPITOL THEATRE
To uphold his standard of qualities set by "Gone With the Wind," which "Rebecca," now at the Capitol Theatre, must follow, David O. Selznick has mustered for it the best production resources and elements at his command. Daphne du Maurier's saturnine tale of tortured love gets complete fidelity in text and mood, finest direction, superb performance and technical excellence in its screen version. Under the direction of Alfred Hitchcock the strangely fascinating drama of a dead wife's spell over her husband and his new and timorous bride is built up with powerful sweep and suspense. Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders and Judith Anderson are the main personages in the cast.

PLAZA THEATRE
Nine musical numbers ranging from songs familiar to every household in the world to the greatest of operatic arias are sung by Jeanette MacDonald in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical romance, "San Francisco," now at the Plaza Theatre with Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy sharing stellar honors. The following numbers are presented:
"Jewel Song" from "Faust," Trio
Prison Scene from "Faust,"
"Nearer My God to Thee," "Love
Me and the World Is Mine," "Ave
Maria," "San Francisco," "My Heart Is Free," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and "Sempre Libera" from "Traviata."

at 20th Century-Fox went into the wardrobe worn by Andrea Leeds in the Technicolor production, "Swanee River," the story of Stephen C. Foster, at the Atlas Theatre.

In this film, which casts her as Foster's bride, Andrea wears crinolines.
Don Ameche and Al Jolson are also in the cast.

CADET THEATRE
Selected as the most valuable

MARGUERITE IN DRYDOCK TODAY

SS. Princess Marguerite, of the Canadian Pacific coastwise fleet, is in drydock at Esquimalt today getting the finishing touches to her overhaul job before resuming service on the "triangle route" at the week-end. The boat was dry-docked by Yarrows Limited.

On Saturday, May 11, the Marguerite will take the 4.30 sailing out of Victoria to Seattle, replacing the Princess Charlotte.

The Charlotte will be withdrawn to be made ready for commissioning in the Alaska tourist service.

Saved Halibut Boat

VANCOUVER (CP)—Graham (Nobby) Clark, Newfoundland-born fisherman, was credited today with saving the $15,000 halibut vessel Western Fisher, which caught fire late yesterday off the entrance to Vancouver harbor, with a crew of six aboard.

Clark, who last January braved high seas in a dinghy off the west coast of Vancouver Island to rescue Capt. George Skinner from death and starvation on the desolate coast, fought his way into the fore-castle of the Western Fisher to smother a blaze.

The fire broke out when an oil stove flooded and set bunks and pabelling ablaze. Damage was estimated at $500.

"If it hadn't been for Nobby," said Capt. Robert Hobbs after the fishing boat had been escorted by the Vancouver police boat to safety at a waterfront float.

"He grabbed his blankets, soaked them with seawater and wrapped them around the stove after Paul Jacobson and I failed twice to fight through the smoke from the fore-castle," Capt. Hobbs added.

Missed Fish Run

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP)—The gill net fleet came in almost empty-handed yesterday and packers said the fishermen could blame themselves for poor first-day catches.

A four-day delay on a price agreement retarded the opening of the Columbia River commercial season and Bonneville Dam fish escapement charts indicated a heavy run passed upriver.

No catches exceeded 200 pounds for the first day and canneries postponed start of operations until they could accumulate stock.

ARROW 1 PRODUCTS

CALGARY (CP)—Arrow 1, well located northwest of the South Turner Valley crude oil field in an unproven area, in a 10-hour test during the week-end, produced 2,080 barrels of crude oil, or at the rate of approximately 5,000 barrels a day.

OUTFOUGHT SUBMARINE

Capt. W. H. Harland, master of the British freighter Rockpool, who on April 2 last was decorated by the King at Buckingham Palace with the Order of the British Empire in recognition of the doughty fight he put up against a German submarine during the winter. Loaded with ore from a Newfoundland port, the Rockpool was not fast and could not outrun the submarine, but she could outfight it and did. At the end of a four-hour fight, Capt. Harland got his ship away, reaching home with his ship and cargo intact. The Rockpool is owned by the Roper Line and is of similar type to the Rushport and Wearport, known in the Victoria trade.

Flying Clubs Head Gets McKee Trophy

OTTAWA (CP)—Major M. A. Seymour of St. Catharines, Ont., president of the Canadian Flying Clubs Association, has been awarded the McKee Trophy for 1939, Canada's highest aviation award, the National Defence Department announced today.

The department said the award was made to Major Seymour "in recognition of the outstanding leadership he gave to the flying clubs of Canada in 1939. He elevated the flying clubs to a position where they could render a great service to Canada."

Major Seymour and other representatives of the association have been in frequent consultation with the chief of air staff, Air Vice-Marshal G. M. Croil, and R.C.A.F. officers since war broke out in connection with the contribution of the flying clubs to promotion of the British Commonwealth air training plan.

Elementary training has been provided for R.C.A.F. pilot officers at the 22 flying clubs throughout the country. This preliminary flying instruction will be continued by agreement between the R.C.A.F. and individual clubs, subject to certain conditions.

The McKee Trophy—also known as the Trans-Canada Trophy—was donated by James Dabell McKee of Pittsburgh as a memorial of the first trans-continental seaplane flight made in September, 1926, by Mr. McKee and an R.C.A.F. officer. He wished it to be a perpetual trophy for the encouragement of aviation, and it has become the most-prized honor in Canadian flying.

Air Travel Upswing

Victoria, Vancouver, Seattle airline travel via Canada took a marked upswing in April, judging from figures just released by W. J. Dalby, district traffic manager, Trans-Canada Airlines, Vancouver. Compared with April, 1939, there was an increase of 123 per

Men Left Ship Without Pants

HALIFAX (CP)—Seamen who escaped from the shipwrecked British freighter Graig as she broke her back on Flint Ledge Saturday night told of the wreck and their rescue in the comfort of a Halifax hotel last night.

After spending all-day Sunday and most of Monday on barren Egg Island the crew of 34 were taken off by fishermen's boats and brought here.

"When we struck I was aft," Wireless Operator George Burns of Glasgow said. "On Capt. Davis' orders I flashed the SOS signal at 11.11 p.m. I gave two more signals before the last at 11.20 p.m., telling that we were getting the boats ready to go overseas."

"We didn't know where we were in the dense fog until the ship grounded," Third Officer Dennis J. Neal of Cardiff said. The chief engineer, W. A. Swift, said the 2,280-ton freighter started to break up as the men were leaving. "We used a rope line from the life boats to the ship," Swift said. "Some men left without their shoes and socks behind. Gunner Radford was injured as we were preparing to leave."

"It was then that we picked up the beam from Egg Island light-house when the fog lifted for a short time. The first eight men went into the starboard boat under Chief Officer Carr. The remaining went in Second Officer Morgan's boat. After we were all safe in the boats, we transferred some men to the starboard boat."

The men rowed about cold and wet for hours, before landing at dawn Sunday. When the light-keeper's food supply threatened to run out, Wireless Officer Burns went out in a boat to retrieve the parcel of food and clothing which a Royal Canadian Air Force plane dropped near the island.

Leaving the island was a tricky job. Several men went under as they were hauled through the surf by a life line attached to a boat. The only casualty of the incident was Radford. He had his knee crushed against the ship's ladder as he was leaving.

Bridge Raised to Accommodate Ships

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—The Bridge of the Gods, crossing the Columbia River above Bonneville, is a prosaic product of modern engineering, but things are happening to it this spring. Under Contractor Carl Favores of Los Angeles a crew of bridge builders are hoisting the 1,850-foot span 44 feet higher in the air.

The reason—so ocean vessels can pass beneath it without bobbing their masts. When Bonneville Dam backed up the river and made it possible for sea-going traffic to reach The Dalles, the bridge, high enough for river and barge craft, got in the way. So on a bid of $438,000 the U.S. government hired Favores to lift the steel crossing from 90 to 134 feet.

With batteries of 500-ton hydraulic jacks under the main spans, the crews inched the bridge skyward, shimming behind the jacks so the bridge couldn't fall back more than 1-16th of an inch. Even that is quite a tumble for a bridge.

At seven-foot intervals the supporting piers are built up with reinforced concrete to the bridge. This completed, the crew heaves her up another seven feet, adds that much to the piers, and so on. The piers are due for their first lengthening this week.

The schedule calls for a seven-foot "growth" per week on the piers for the next six weeks. By that time the bridge will be high enough and the simpler job of joining the deck with the road, via steeper and longer approaches, will start.

Damage Suit in Naval Sinking

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A collision the night of April 3 between the fishing boat Lone Eagle and the U.S. destroyer Crosby, during which the smaller vessel sank, was revealed when a damage suit, asking $16,000, was filed in federal court by Paul Puratich, owner of the Lone Eagle.

His complaint said his boat sank two minutes after the destroyer ploughed through it off Point Arguello, about 100 miles south of here, but that all hands were saved by lifelines from the Crosby.

cent in passenger business. This reflects the addition of a second daily trip to the east and a third trip to Seattle.

Between Vancouver and Seattle T.C.A. carried 438 passengers during the month, or 151 more than in April, 1939, an increase of 32 per cent. Indications are that May will well outstrip April business,

Wheat

WINNIPEG (CP)—Lack of selling pressure and moderately good buying by export interests steadied wheat futures prices throughout a dull session on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. Fluctuations were fractional and at the close quotations were 1/4 cent higher to 1/2 cent lower, May at 88 1/2, July 90 and October 92 1/2.

Overseas houses were credited with taking approximately 500,000 bushels of wheat out of the pit, apart from a few odd loads reported sold to the United Kingdom. Actual sales of Canadian wheat abroad were difficult to confirm.

Cash wheat price spreads remained unchanged, although demand continued for Nos. 3 and 4 northern, No. 5 wheat, Nos. 1 and 2 Garnet and No. 4 special.

Except for oats, which were given fair support by domestic houses, mills and exporters, coarse-grain trading was uninteresting.

Western Canada farmers delivered 136,000 bushels of wheat to country elevators yesterday, compared with 352,000 unloaded on the same day a year ago.
